Pin 'Em Skit

Have four to five clothespins per kid in the room and hand them out. Explain that when the music begins, the object of the game is to get all clothes pins off of yourself and on to someone else. Turn the lights off and the strobes and music on. You may want to put girls on one side of room and guys on another (divide it with a volleyball net or something). Explain that when the lights come on, one or two folks should have about 100 pins on them. Pull them up and parade the winner.

There is one more key to this skit. You will not want them playing with the pins all night during the talk, so dress a tough kid or leader in protective gear (motorcycle helmet with face shield, chest protector, turtleneck, scarf, gloves, shin guards, thick pants) and put a bullseye on their chest. Tell everybody to grab all their clothes pins and bring in your human target and play music as they throw their pins at him.

Kids can't believe they are doing this, and when you stop the music, all your pins are gathered up at the front so they aren't throwing them at each other. Sweep them in a corner and go on with club!

A possible sell is a kid in real wrestling singlet and headgear coming in to music, maybe dejected because he can't pin anybody — so you must find the easiest person to "pin!"

Indoor Scavenger Hunt

Four teams find: Four Fruit of the Loom tags, the longest belt chain, the biggest ball of gum, family pictures, a love letter. Think through things they can come up with and get a great prize for the winning team.

Q-Tip War

Divide the room in half. You may already have a tape line down the middle or a volleyball net or rope. Each person gets a straw and each side a bunch of Q-Tips. If you can get different colors for each team that would be the best, otherwise just judge visually. The task is to get as many of your Q-Tips on to the other side in the allotted time.

Explain that if they get caught throwing Q-tips instead of shooting them through the straw, it is a 10 point deduction for their team.

At the end, get them to shoot them all at you and throw the straws up front or the rest of club will be a disaster. See the Pin 'Em skit above for an idea how to pull that off.

Car Stuff

Explain this skit inside before going outside to the driveway. Have a competition between sexes and classes. Each team has 30 seconds to get as many people into (not on) a small car. Pull them out and count.

Remove the rear view mirror before club. This happens so fast it doesn't hurt the car, honest.

You may want music outside and you may need a bullhorn depending on the size of club. You may use a Guinness book of world record deal for a sell.

Musical Food

Put an apple, onion and tomato in separate lunch bags in front of everyone. Mix them up, throw them out into crowd and start music. When music stops whoever has a bag takes a bite. You may need referees to declare who had it when the music stopped. The number of objects will obviously depend on size of club. Try to think of great objects!
